POLITICAL.

Second Day of the Democratic National Convention.

Governor Seymour Chosen Permanent President.

Address from the Cooper Institute to the Tammany Hall Convention.

No Prospect of an Early Adjournment.

Pendleton Stock Continually on the Decline.

A Desperate Fight Expected Over the Platform.

Adjournment Until 10 O'clock This Morning.

Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.

TAMMANY HALL, New York, July 6.

A crowd was gathered in front of Tammany this morning, and there are innumerable contests with the different delegations who don't see why they should have a seat. A horse-car conductor for a ticket in order to get into a Democratic convention. The hall is densely packed, New York having a preponderance of the spectators admitted.

The report of the Committee on Permanent Organization was read with applause, the name of Seymour naturally rousing tumultuous applause. The Chair said he concurred, by signs that New York is entered in counting him. A Church Seymour, who had been reserved on for presenting Chase at the proper time, but declined to act in his portion of a Precident of the convention, it would be improper for him to do so.

SECOND DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

TAMMANY, New York, July 6—2:30 p. m.

The second indication of the feeling of the convention was a Tennessee resolution, referring Andrew Johnson. Less than a fourth of the delegates responded to the call, and the resolution was applauded, but they made up in volume what they lacked in numbers, and multi-Tennessee flag was given to it. Immediately after the reading of the resolution, Sanders offered a resolution tendering thanks to Judge Black for his able and patriotic letter, which resolution was read. The nominal Democrats who remained, many hours broke out, all over the hall, and it was impossible to hear a word of the letter. It was interrupted on six or seven occasions by cheering, and at the close, if Brooks could have succeeded in getting a hearing, he could have been heard more distinctly than before Mr. Seymour could announce the appointment of the various committees. The applause continued for several minutes, and the spectators left the hall in search of the previous demonstration.

Gen. Cochrane is presiding, and Tammany Hall is proving itself about the worst hall in the United States for hearing a speaker in.

THIRD DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

TAMMANY, New York, July 6—10 p. m.

The question is now agitating the old question whether the Presidential shall be nominated before the platform is adopted.

Pendleton desired to get on the platform of resolutions. Bulkhiss, of Missouri, moved an amendment that nothing be done towards nomination till after the platform is adopted. The vote seemed about evenly divided, and a call of the roll was demanded. Before the roll-call was completed, Governor Sigler got the floor and tried to speak in favor of announcing the names of candidates.

Mr. Seymour, though knowing well enough that time was out of order, tried to permit him to be heard, but the confusion was so great that he could not be heard, and Sigler had to suspend, and, amid much confusion and considerable cursing did make known what the vote was, but the result of the vote I have not. New York asked to retire for consultation, and the request was granted. During their absence the vote was announced as adopting the resolution by a majority of nearly a hundred, which the Pendleton men regard as a triumph. Will adjourn, soon till four o'clock for the platform.

SIXTH DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK, July 6, 6:35 p. m.

Opinions differ as to the effect of this postponement of the nomination till after the adoption of a platform. It is a noticeable fact that the States of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, all strongly for the vote, apparently unwilling to risk voting on the latter title, or to hazard their prestige.

SEVENTH DESPATCH.

The first performance this afternoon was the reception of Governor Seymour and his friend flag. He entered, unheralded and the convention began cheering, under the impression that his flag belonged to the organization of the delegates. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention, then expected, but the nasty brigand, stifled in a full suit of light-blue, with carefully trimmed beard, made his way to the platform, bowed his thanks to the cheering and disappeared, just about the time the convention began to get down to business.

EIGHTH DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK, July 6.

The following are the names, which rooms in the Tammany Hall building have been assigned to the delegations, or the use of which has been applied for. Many of the delegations have not yet arrived, and many have not yet applied for rooms:

[Illegible]

Whereupon Pennsylvania modified her usual weakness in show for hand. Kennedy, United Kingdom of Ireland, Ireland, under the New York and the Chair attempted to put the half of the operating to constitutions came from the Chair, delegates. They were proceedings to endeavor to keep, first a Platform declaring the present reconstruction and repealing the party overturn it. They regard peoples such a platform their main business. Afterwards, they will feel more at liberty in the matter of nominations. The first adjournment without a night session signified nothing beyond the fact that both New York and Ohio came in the conviction that the hobbed following may be set down as the exact calculations of the best informed leaders.

TWENTY-FOUR'S CALCULATION.

The President men have made out the exact votes on which they can designate say for the first ballot:

California	5
Illinois	16
Indiana	13
Iowa	8
Kansas	3
Kentucky	11
Maine	7
Maryland	7½
Massachusetts	13
Michigan	7
Nevada	3
New Hampshire	5
Ohio	21
Oregon	3
West Virginia	3
Wisconsin	8
Total	130½

This, it will be observed, omits all the Southern States. They count on gains from them on the second and third ballots, provided they can hold their Northern column firm.

STATE PREFERENCES.

New York will vote for Sanford E. Church solid, but he will get little or no other support. Pennsylvania, in the same way, will support Hendricks. Connecticut will vote solid for Governor English, and will expect eight or ten votes. Maryland casts a complimentary vote for Reverdy Johnson, and California probably for Judge Field, although an effort is to be made in the interest of Governor Haight of that State.

GOVERNOR SEYMOUR

is in town, at this writing, and is receiving large numbers of delegates to-night, who are mustering his capacity for the Presidency. They don't welcome every such implement with him as a big man.

RUMORS

has also been in town. The Pendleton men bitterly declare that he can prevent the use of his name by a letter to that effect, but they believe he will prove treachery by him to Pendleton.

SEYMOUR AFFIRMS

accurate that Seymour has arrived in the city to-day to be a candidate, and New York men say he is in earnest.

NINTH DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK, July 6.

The crowds present about the hotels overflowing among for Pendleton, and a good deal of bitter feeling begins to manifest itself in the air, the Democratic leaders are not at all down. The name of Governor Seymour, who had been reserved for the first presidential ballot, is received with great applause, and still more deafening cheers greeted Governor Hendricks, of Indiana. It was also recommended that the rules of the Democratic Convention of 1864 be adopted for the government of this convention.

Mr. Mackin, of Connecticut, moved the adoption of the report on the discharge of the committee.

A delegate from Florida inquired whether, on the adoption of the report, the two-thirds rule on balloting for President and Vice-President would apply, for a nomination, two-thirds of the entire representation or two-thirds of the votes to be cast in the Electoral College.

The Chair put the question on the acceptance of the report and the discharge of the committee, which was decided in the affirmative, and the committee was discharged.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Murphy, of New York, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following, which committee to sit during the sessions of the convention:

[Illegible]

The Chair appointed Bigler, of Pennsylvania, and Hammond, of South Carolina, a committee to wait upon the President and inform him that the convention was ready to receive him.

Chairman of the Convention:

I thank you for the honor you have done me in calling me to preside over your deliberations. This convention is made up of a large number of delegates from all parts of the country. It is a gathering the great degree we are strangers to each other, and we are therefore unable to judge of the relative merits of different candidates. We cannot at once learn which of the many names presented is the one on whom which bear upon the minds of citizens; for the people cannot be bribed, and are forced to act without delay upon questions of an exciting character, and of deep import to our country; therefore, to maintain order, to restrain all evil influence of passion, and to secure the action of our whole body of delegates, it is at this time a great duty, and not upon my own ability, to sustain me in this position to which you have called me, and I will faithfully

[Illegible]

I will not under greater responsibility at this time than those which weigh upon us. (Applause.) It is not a mere party contest which we are waging, but one upon our country from the dangers which threaten it. Let us, then, counsel together, and with the shackles which, in the shape of bad laws, and of corrupt practices, have been forged upon us, cast off, and march forward like giants. (Cheers.)

We hope, and that we can give assurance that we are not to be disappointed, that those who come to us from the people to-day, in their homes and in all the walks of life, will be with them from all sections of the country. Such observations must be made at this time, and I will not be unfaithful till after the platform and candidates are presented.

Let us go to work, and show that we are governed upon great earnest purpose to help all classes of our people. Let us show that we are not against each, we should look the public mind in the face, and understand it. Let us do that we need counsel. (Cheers.) Let us carry the pass to the people, and if we do this we shall be the true friends of those dears. (Cheers.) We are forced to a great task. It is serious. From the action of the late Republican Convention, it is apparent that they have their hearts to excite as much of party silver as possible, and to array class against class, and section to section, in the hope of thereby securing success. We must, in view of the condition of our country, as a matter of duty, rise above all such influences, and, in the interests of the people, of the whole people, of the whole country, we must

THE TARIFF CONVENTION

The Democratic Convention organized yesterday with Horatio Seymour as permanent Chairman. The Convention voted, at first, to be governed by the rules of the House of Representatives, but afterward adopted a set of rules of its own. The Committee on Resolutions will not report before Saturday. The Committee on Credentials, it was said, would report to-day. There is no question that the Convention will be largely composed of the Board of Trade delegates. Each delegate is entitled to cast as many votes as there are members of the Legislature from his district. The Convention will be composed of 1,000 members, and the whole number of votes will be 2,000. The Convention will be composed of 1,000 members, and the whole number of votes will be 2,000. OPENING OF THE CONVENTION.

The convention opened about three-quarters of an hour later than the time set last night, still apparently a little unwilling to go to work in earnest.

RESOLUTIONS FROM ALEX. H. STEPHENS.

After listening to a long prayer, Mr. Hayman, instead of reading the call for the convention, as Reconstruction, which was done in order, gave the floor to a Southern delegate, who sent to a desk and read resolutions from Alex. H. Stephens. The reading was greeted with loud applause; but the resolutions were not heard, and do not seem to have been taken up. Whether they will be presented at all, the Democracy of Georgia have not expressed, and they have no reason for doing so, as they form. New Yorkers are already beginning to get heartily exasperated at the persistency with which the representatives of Southern men wanted.

NEW-YORK DISPATCH.

Special Despatch to the Chicago Tribune.
New-York, July 7.

The bidding and counter-bidding for the vigorous stand to be taken in the platform was recorded, have failed to come to any agreement which they believe will be satisfactory to the party, and which they believe will divert the New York thunder now aimed against them. The most conservative Democrats here admit that Seymour's nomination is impossible, and that Hendricks can only run behind Pendleton. Chase himself now said that he believed he could not be nominated, but that he thought he should receive more votes than any other man except Pendleton. He intends to read the financial plank of the platform this morning, and then make his speech, which he has all ready. He will not withdraw after the nomination, but will support the ticket.

The Chase men cropping out in the platform they will go for Chase rather than for no nominated, and others for some other man. Chase is the only man who has any public anything that I notice here.

The delegates are being entertained at all kinds of balls and dinners, and cigars are spending much time in the corridors.

CHASE AGAIN.

THIRD DESPATCH.

Special Despatch to The Chicago Tribune.
New-York, July 7.

A NOW IN THE INDIANA DELEGATION.

The Democratic party in Indiana is now in a peculiar position. The Democratic party had passed a convention instructing the delegates to vote as a unit. The State election in October will be a very close one, and the party is divided into two hostile factions. The Democratic party wants to go to the Democratic National Convention as a unit, and the Democratic party wants to go to the Democratic National Convention as a unit, and the Democratic party wants to go to the Democratic National Convention as a unit, and the
